

Historical Newspapers: Australian Collection

Providing nearly 170 years of coverage, this ProQuest collection includes the two leading Australian newspapers: The Age (1854–2000) and the Sydney Morning Herald (1831–2000).

Both newspapers are considered two of the most influential Australian newspapers and have been labeled Australia's newspapers of record. With these newspapers, gain insight into politics, business, culture, sports, and more throughout Australian history.

Use selected databases

You'll then be brought to the specific search bar for just that database.

Use a simple search by typing in any keywords. This will bring you to a list of results.

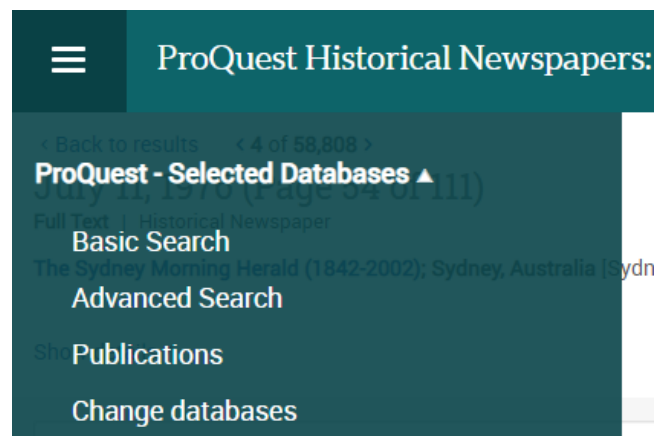

Use the filters on the left side if you need to narrow down the date and click on a title when you've found an article you wish to read to be taken to the full text replica of that page. You can use the arrows to turn the pages of that issue.

In the top right corner, you have several options. Download a PDF copy of the page, generate a citation for a bibliography, or email or print the article.

If you wish to do another search, click on the three lines in the top left corner to find the links to the search bar.

Using Advanced search allows you to combine search terms and dates at once.

A screenshot of the ProQuest Advanced Search interface. At the top, there is a header with the text "Advanced Search" and several links: "Command Line", "Recent searches", "Field codes", and "Search tips". On the right side of the header, there are logos for "LIVERPOOL CITY LIBRARY" and "LIVERPOOL CITY COUNCIL". Below the header, there is a search form with two input fields. The first field is empty, and the second field contains the text "AND". To the right of each input field is a dropdown menu with the text "Anywhere". Below the input fields, there is a link that says "Add a row". At the bottom left, there is a label "Publication date:" followed by a dropdown menu with the text "All dates". At the bottom right, there are two buttons: "Search" and "Clear form".

The results list will work the same as for a simple search.
